AN EPIDEMIC AT HAND,

ANOTHER NEW CASE OF YELLOW FEVER IN BRUNSWICK.

Two More Suspicions Cases Likely to be Pronounced Fever To-day-The Bad Feeling Between the Officials.

SAVANNAH, GA., Sept. 15.-The Bruns wick Health Board efficially represents che new same of yellow fever to-lav, that of Miss Turner, a young lady of the family in which a case was reported yeaterday. This makes three cases at present in the city. The Morning News' special correspondent reports two suspicious cases which will possibly be declared yellow fever to-morrow.

A mass meeting of Brunswick citizens was held to-day at which the Marine hospital surgeons were sharply criticised. But later the leaders of the meeting expressed regret that they had acted would continue to act together for the city's good.

In consequence of the meeting Surgeon
John Guiteras made preparations to leave John Guiteras made preparations to leave the city to-night, but upon request from Surgeon General Wyman he will ren ain for some days yet. The local physicians made a statement to the Board of Health denying that they had concealed cases of fever from Dr. Guiteras. No official statement to that effect has been made, but the feeling is general throughout the city that an epidemic is at hand. Still there has, as yet, been no such the city that an epidemic is at hand. Still there has, as yet, been no such exodus as there was after the first cases were announced. The strict quarantines that all Southern cities will maintain against Brunswick make her plight sad. Provisions, nurses and doctors are needed, and at once. Precautions Against Cholers

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 15.—The authorities are doing everything possible to prevent the spread of the cholera plague at Brunswick, Ga. Supervising Surgeon-General Wyman was in conference with the secretary of the treasury in relation to the matter this morning. Instruction have been issued at Brunswick to permit no one to leave the city without proper inspection, and the rail-roads are prohibited from selling tickets to any point south of Atlanta. It is not probable that fever could be carried north of that point at this season of the year, and there would be no danger from healthy passengers coming north, provided their baggage is thoroughly fumigated. There will be a quarantine camp established just out of Brunswick, and all persons leaving the city will, it is said, be required to pass through this camp for inspection. The mails are now being for inspection. The mails are now being fumigated. Dr. H. D. Geddings, who has been stationed at Delaware Breakwater, has been ordered to Brunswick to assist the force of physicians now on duty. SERIOUS FLOODS IN MADISON.

Proficient Oysters.

It was an enterprising oyster who lived in a shell in the year 1840 and was correlled in a porterhouse in London. If we can be-lieve the words of thousands who saw it, the thing actually whistled. Douglas Jerrold, who saw it, surmised that the oyster had undoubtedly "been crossed in love and now whistled to keep up appearances, with an idea of showing that it didn't care." Thackeray says that he was in the shop one day when an American came in to see the startling freak of nature. After hearing the talented mollusk go through its usual performance he walked contemptuously out, remarking at the same time that "it nothing to an oyster he knew of in Massachusetts which whistled 'Yankee Doodle right through and followed its master about the house just like a dog."-Exchange.

ABSOLUTELY PURB

HE WON THE CASE. A Shrewd Lawyer Who Used the Bible as His Legal Anthority.

In the early days of interior Missouri the late Judge E—cut cordwood, cleared up his bomestead farm and was employed upon one side of nearly every case that came being for some years the only lawyer in the county.

He had no books except an old leather covered Bible and an old volume or two of history similarly bound, but had read law a short time in Kentucky in his youth. He was very small and insignificant in appearance, but became before his death a splendid lawyer and an honored judge. A young attorney from the east settled in the little country town, with his library of about haif a dozen new and handsomely bound lawbooks, and on his first appearance in a case he brought most of his library to the justice's office in a fine, beautifully flowered carpet bag, popular in that day. E- was engaged against him and as usual bad not a book. When his adversary carefully drew his books from his pretty carpet bag and laid them on the table, E- looked astonished, but quickly recovered his ready resources and asked the justice to excuse him for a few moments. He burried to his home stead, half a mile or so away, and put his old leather bound Bible and histories into a grain sack and brought them to court, imitating his opponent in laying them before him on the table. The evidence was introduced, and the eastern man, being for the plaintiff, made his opening argument and read at length from his textbooks. E- made his characteristic speech in reply, closing by read-ing law from his old Bible just the reverse of that read by his opponent and took his seat, putting his Bible on the table. His adversary reached over and picked it up, and seeing what it was eagerly addressed the justice: "Your honor," said he, "this man is a humbug and a pettifogger. Why, sir, this is the Bible from which he has pretended

The old justice looked indignant, and interrupting the young attorney said:
"Set down, durn ye. What better law can we git than the Bible?" He then decided the case in favor of the defendant.-Green

The Art of Conversation. The chief business of the host or hostess is to give the occasion, to suggest and to bring sympathetic minds into play, so that as iron, in the language of Scripture, sharpeneth iron, so may a man the countenance of his friend. The gift for this kind of management is not inborn in many. Indeed it is inborn in very few, but much can be done by self control and practice to develop it. So long as there is anything stiff, stilted and distant in talking the best result has not been reached. All who have written on conversation are agreed on this. "To talk without effort is, after all, the great charm of talking." The social party is not the place for academical lectures, and he is apt to be thought either a prig or a pretender who adventures upon them. Men like Macaulay and Carlyle were privileged. But they were masters of monologue rather not to be followed. Montaigne, in his essay on conversation, has some very good hints. This is one: "In table talk I prefer the merry man before the wise one, and in common conversation the most able speaker, even though he does not always mean what he says, and so of other things." This points out one great Earnestness is apt to overleap itself, and one sided enthusiasm is sure to do so. The man with a hobby, the man with a grievance, the man with a cause, these are one and all, save in very exceptional cases, bad subjects for the master of conversation to manage and control. And just as they violate harmony and fair interchange by the interposition of their egotism so does the person who would fain lay bare his bosom and treat the party to a revelation of all his private affairs, his sufferings and his faults.-Argosy.

An Interrupted Conversation.

A conversation attempted by telephone led to a grave misunderstanding between a Biddeford (Me.) man and his family physi-The man's wife was sick, called the doctor up to ask what he should do for her. He explained her symptoms, which were, as he said, a severe pain in the back of the head and nausea. The physician replied that the symptoms indicated malaria, and the inquiry was made as to treatment. At this point the connection was broken, and the reply which was supposed to be that of the doctor was really part of a conversation by an engineer relative to the condition of a boiler. This was what was heard by the anxious husband: "Well, she's pretty hard, but I guess you may be able to hammer her out. Then turn on the hose and let her dry, and she'll be ready to work in the morning." The innocent doctor at the other end of the tele phone wondered why the conversation end-ed so abruptly and could not think why he was not called to the case. - Exchange.
